

What we're looking for:

At Onward, I oversee assigning and editing for a range of client projects. Our clients are healthcare organizations/hospitals; universities; and others. I'm looking for strong healthcare writers who understand medical jargon and are also adept at crafting patient stories that read like consumer magazine stories. We also have a need for writers who are adept at explaining often complex research, both for a professional/research audience and for others, and for profile writers. We don't take pitches; all stories or projects come from our clients. Please just come prepared to tell me a bit about yourself! Fees vary; some are project fees for annual reports. Per article rates hover in the $1/word range.
