Eric Fitzsimmons—AHCJ Pitchfest, December 2026

Fitzsimmons Bio:

Eric Fitzsimmons is a senior editor at Cancer Today magazine where he oversees the magazine's web content. He has more than 10 years' experience writing and editing stories about cancer for patients and caregivers, and he enjoys finding the threads that tie complex scientific findings to meaningful results for the people affected by this disease. Eric has also written for Living Beyond Breast Cancer and Montgomery Media.

Pitch blurb:

Cancer Today is looking for well-researched stories on cancer care for a readership of patients and caregivers. What new treatments are improving survival? How has a new treatment class changed the experience of care? What experiences have changed thanks to advancements in the ways doctors understand and approach care?

Rates

For print stories, our rate is $1 per word according to the assigned word count. Features typically run at 2,000 words. Front-of-book stories are 600 or 800 words.

Web stories pay 60 cents per word, with a standard 700-word story paying $420.