Noema seeks original essays that have a clear, focused thesis and spend the length of the piece explaining and defending that thesis. To ensure that your essay is sharply organized around the thesis (and isn't trying to take on too much), please include subheadlines (three words, give or take) – we may decide to cut them, but having a sort of outline helps discipline the writer and editor. Our sweet spot for word count is between 2500-4000 words. Full guidelines, including a model pitch and our AI policy, can be found at: https://docs.google.com/document/d/1Hu8dZS6s6HhT3mYeVmTZS0KyMJama4xtURsZPRj81sY/edit

Rates

Noema generally pays $3,000 for first-time writers for the magazine. Returning writers may get a higher rate. Depending on the story, the writer, their experience level, etc the rate may also change.